1.1. Symbols of the city: coat of arms, flag

Description of the coat of arms of Lutsk

In the shield with a rounded bottom (so called Spanish) in the golden field a silver coat of arms of St. Nicholas is in the full episcopal attire, barefoot. The main episcopal decorations - halo, crutch, epitrachel and the Gospel - are highlighted in gold. In his right hand, St. Nicholas holds a crutch in the form of a six-armed Protective (patriarchal) cross, which symbolizes the victory of Christians over the forces of the east, protection from invasions and plagues, the conquest of the elements. In his left hand he holds an open book, symbolizing the Gospel, the protection of God's powers, and the protection of the sciences. Bare feet symbolize the mythological functions of the ruler of the weather and the water element.

Symbolism of color

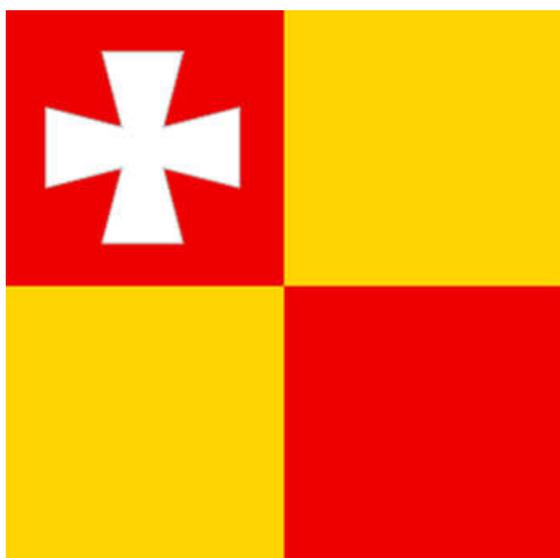

Red color – courage, bravery and victory, blood shed for faith.

Gold – nobility, justice, mercy, meekness, spirituality.

Silver – wealth, innocence, beauty, sincerity.

Gold with red – will, stability, independence.

Silver with red – courage.

Description of the flag of Lutsk

Rectangular cloth with an aspect ratio of 1: 1, divided into four equal parts. Upper from the holder and lower from the edge are red. The other two parts are yellow.

On the upper part from the holder (red) is a silver (white) Volyn cross.

The banner combined the color of the symbols of the coat of arms of the city of Lutsk and Volyn.

1.2. Brief historical background

Lutsk is one of the most ancient cities in Ukraine. The first documentary reference about Lutsk dates back to the Hypatian Codex from 1085, when the city became the center of internecine fight between the heirs of Yaroslav the Wise. However, archaeological research give the ground to believe that the settlement on the territory of modern Lutsk was founded before the XI century.

In the period of Kyiv Rus, Lutsk was the capital of a separate principality, which was part of the Volyn, and later Volyn-Galician land. In the XII century Luchesk had strong wooden fortifications that enabled to withstand a six-week siege by regiments of Yuri Dolgorukyi in the spring of 1150. During these events, his son, the young Prince Andrew was close to death.

Lutsk witnessed the Tatar-Mongol invasion. The chronicle shows that in 1259 the city withstood the siege of Khan Kuremsa. In 1267 Prince Vasilko, on demand of the Khan's commander Burundai, destroyed fortifications in Brody.

In the second half of the 14th century the role of Lutsk as the capital of the Volyn land became more significant due to the reign of Lubart-Demetrius. He replaced wooden fortification constructions with bricks, that changed the external appearance of Lutsk castle. After the death of Lubart, Lutsk continues to be the residence of Lithuanian-Russian princes: Vytautas (1392-1430) and Svidrigiello (1431-1452).

In 1429 a Congress of European Monarchs took place in Lutsk to discuss the issues concerning protection of Europe from Ottoman Empire. On the meeting Lithuanian Prince Vytautas hosted Polish King Wladyslaw II Jagiello, the future emperor, King of Rome, Bohemia, Hungary Sigismund I of Luxembourg, King of England and Sweden Eric VII.

In 1432, Lutsk was granted Magdeburg rights. As a result the citizens of Lutsk received the opportunity to elect bodies of self-government.

Since the late XVI century Lutsk Castle lost its significance as a defensive fortress, but the city remains to be the social and spiritual capital of the region. Due to the large number of sacral buildings, contemporaries called it "Rome of Volyn".

After the Union of Lublin in 1569, Volyn integrated into the Kingdom of Poland. Lutsk became the capital of the newly formed voivodship. At that time, the city gradually became more and more Polish. In order to prevent the Polish influence and resist consequences of the Brest Church Union (1596) in Lutsk in early XVII century a fraternity was founded. It received the official recognition of the king with the privilege to build a church and shelter.

At late of XVII-XVIII centuries. Lutsk is slowly declining. It is devastated by frequent fires, floods and epidemics. Cultural and religious Rus (Ukrainian) life became gradually fading in the city. Ukrainian language was replaced by Polish, and Poles become governing officials.

In 1795, after the third partition of Poland, the Volyn region together with Lutsk were annexed by the Russian Empire. Zhytomyr became the capital of the newly formed Volhynian Governorate, and Lutsk remained the centre of the district (povit).

XIX century didn't lead to the revival of economic and social life of the city. The economic development of Lutsk became only after the construction of the South Eastern Railway line in 1890's. At that time (1895) the population of Lutsk was 15125 people.

In 1915 during the World War I the Brusilov Offensive took place in outskirts of Lutsk. As a result, the Russian Army occupied the territory of Volhynia, Galicia and Bukovina including Lutsk and tremendously defeated Austro-Hungarian troops and got into the history of the World War I.

After the February Revolution in 1917, the blue and yellow flag was hoisted over Lutsk for the first time. In April 1917 it was established the first Ukrainian socio-political association the "Ukrainian Community". During the Hetmanate government in August 1918, the organization "Prosvita" was formed. On December 20, 1918, troops of the Supreme Commander Symon Petliura entered Lutsk.

On May 16, 1919, Lutsk was seized by Polish troops, and according to the Peace of Riga 1920, western Volhynia was included to the Second Polish Republic. In March 1921, Lutsk became the capital of the new Volyn Voivodeship and started to develop its infrastructure actively.

In the autumn of 1939 the city became part of the USSR, becoming the center of the Volyn region, which formed the western part of the former Volyn region.

On June 25, 1941, the city was occupied by German troops.

It was preceded by a terrible event - on June 23, NKVD soldiers executed about 3,000 prisoners without trial in the courtyard of the Lutsk prison.

In the postwar period, Lutsk was gradually rebuilt. The city developed especially rapidly in the 60's and 70's of the XX century. In 1973, new city borders were approved. At the same time, the construction of powerful enterprises began: a bearing plant, a melange factory and other industrial facilities, which led to a rapid increase in population. Construction of significant housing estates: Zavokzalny and Hnidavsky began.

Since Ukraine became the independent state, the city of Lutsk remained the centre of the Volyn region and kept its leading position in the political, economic, cultural and religious life of the region. Currently, Lutsk is actively developing and modernizing. New enterprises, infrastructure and social facilities are being opened, and active housing and commercial construction is underway.

On October 25, 2019 the Lutsk city territorial community was formed after the territory of Prylutske village council of Kivertsi district joined the city of Lutsk.
